PR2a. [HALF OF RESPONDENTS WERE ASKED THIS VERSION OF THE QUESTION:] Next I'd like to tell you about some new ways that health insurance could be offered to people who don't have jobs or whose jobs don't give them health insurance. The federal government could create a way for these people to choose to buy health insurance from the government instead of from insurance companies.

The government would run the insurance plan and decide which medical care would be paid for and how much would be paid, like insurance companies do, which might mean people will have to pay some of the cost of their medical care themselves. The government insurance plan would be less expensive than other insurance plans because the government would not need to make a profit the way businesses do and because the government is able to negotiate lower prices with doctors and hospitals than insurance companies can. Would you favor the government offering people this insurance, oppose it, or neither favor nor oppose it?

AP-GfK Poll Methodology

The Associated Press Poll was conducted by GfK Roper Public Affairs & Media – a division of GfK Custom Research North America – for Stanford University. Stanford University’s participation in this project was made possible by a grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. This telephone poll is based on a nationally-representative probability sample of 1,502 adults age 18 or older. The interviews were conducted October 29th- November 9th, 2009, with 1,052 respondents on landlines and 450 on cellular telephones. Both the landline and cell phone samples were provided by Survey Sampling International. The survey sample included the contiguous 48 states, Alaska and Hawaii. Interviews were conducted in both English and Spanish.

The combined landline and cell phone data were weighted to account for probabilities of selection, as well as age, sex, education and race, using targets from the March 2008 supplement of the Current Population Survey. In addition to these factors, the weighting takes into account the patterns of land and cell phone usage by region from the 2008 Spring estimates provided by Mediamark Research Inc.

The margin of sampling error is plus or minus 2.5 percentage points at the 95% confidence level, for results based on the entire sample of adults. The margin of sampling error is higher and varies for results based on sub-samples. In our reporting of the findings, percentage points are rounded off to the nearest whole number. As a result, percentages in a given table column may total slightly higher or lower than 100%. In questions that permit multiple responses, columns may total significantly more than 100%, depending on the number of different responses offered by each respondent.

Trend data are displayed for selected questions from previous AP-GfK Polls that also consisted of telephone interviews with nationally-representative probability samples of adults age 18 or older. Details about all AP-GfK Polls are available at <http://www.ap-gfkipoll.com>.
